There were doors __1__ round, but they were all locked and when Alice __2__ all the way down one side and up the __3__, trying every door, she walked sadly down the middle, wondering how she was ever to get out again.

__4__, she came upon a little three-legged table, all made of solid glass. There was nothing on it but a tiny golden key and Alice's first idea was that this might __5__ one of the doors of the hall; but, alas! Either the locks __6__ too large or the key was too small, but at any rate it would not open __7__ doors. __8__, on the second time round she came upon a low curtain she had not noticed before, and behind it was a little door about fifteen inches high. She tried the little golden key in the lock and to her great delight it fitted!

Alice opened the door and found that it __9__ to a small passage, not much larger than a rat hole. She knelt down and looked along the passage into the loveliest garden she __10__ saw. How she longed to get out of that dark hall and wander about among those beds of bright flowers and those cool fountains, but she could not even get her head __11__. "And even if my head would go through," __12__ poor Alice, "it would be of very little use without my shoulders. Oh, how I wish I could shut up like a telescope! I think I could, if I only knew how __13__." For, you see, so many out-of-the-way things had __14__ lately that Alice had begun to think that very few things indeed __15__ really impossible.

__16__ it seemed to be no use waiting by the little door, __17__ went back to the table, half hoping she __18__ find another key in it, or at any rate a book of rules to tell her what to do. This __19__ she found a little bottle on it, which certainly was not there before and tied round the neck of the bottle was a paper label with the __20__ "Drink Me" beautifully printed on it, in big letters. Alice was not a little bit surprised!
